

Each [] is a sentence of any wished length.

Alex, Carmen and Gersande are sitting on a bench in a real fictional space. It is sunny around them. A slight breeze brushing off their cheeks while they discuss something of utmost importance: what is happening around them.

Alex: I knew the seagulls would come ask for food at some point. Look!

Знаех си, че чайките ще дойдат да ни тормозят за храна по някое време. Вижте!

Carmen: []!

Gersande: []?

Alex and Carmen are silent for a moment, thinking about the question Gersande asked.

Alex: To be honest, I have never thought about it.

Честно казано, никога не се бях замисляла за това.

Carmen: []...

Alex: Do you think we should go and talk to that person?

Дали не трябва да идем и да говорим с този човек?

Carmen: [!] []?

Gersande: . [] ...

Carmen: [] . [] . []?

Gersande and Alex burst out laughing.

Alex: Ok, that might make a total sense. But perhaps we were completely wrong.

Looking at them now, I think they just wanted to have some ice cream. Pfff, maybe we were completely wrong!

Окей, в това може би има смисъл. Обаче, може и да сме в грешка. Като ги гледам сега, ми се струва, че просто са искали малко сладолед. Пффф, май не сме изобщо прави!

Alex made a good point. Everyone has a moment of reflection in silence.

Gersande: []

Alex: Why not go join them?

Защо да не се включим и ние?

Carmen: !

Alex: Well, what I meant was this: the sun is too strong, we should put some sunscreen!

Ами, имах предвид следното: слънцето е прекалено силно, трябва да си сложим малко крем!

Carmen: .

Gersande: ?

Carmen: . . ?

Gersande: ?

Carmen: .

Alex: Yes, I was also planning to leave at some point. I am wondering if it's not time to do that now.

Да, и аз планирах да си тръгна по някое време. Чудя се дали сега не е точният момент.

Carmen: !

Gersande: !

Alex: Nah, exactly!

Ха, точно така!

Gersande: ?