An electronic mailing list is a special use of email that allows the widespread distribution of information to many internet users. It is usually composed of email addresses of subscribers to an organisation, and emails collected with manual means. Hackerspaces often maintain a mailing list, to share news, content amongst the subscribers and discuss several issues.

Emails magically flying through the Interwebs.

Consider:

being a feminist, subscribed to the mailing list of a hackerspace. You send an open call for a feminist tech event and you receive mostly patronising, offensive, and sarcastic responses.

What would you do?
